Overview

This course provides students with an outline of the legislature relating to working at heights and guidance on how to maintain compliance. Workers discuss the specific requirements for their work site and how engineered practices create a safe work environment. Students are educated in the direct standards for the usage of their equipment and are familiarized with the criteria for issue, equipment marking, inspection, record keeping, maintenance and storage as well as removal from service.

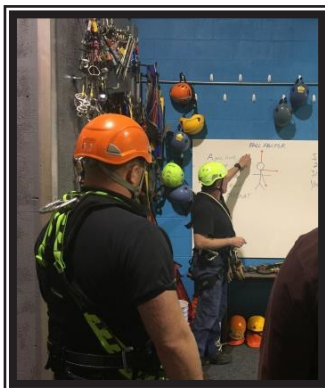

Topics and Regulations

Maintain your industry compliance by learning what regulations and standards affect your work at height. Our instructors will address OSHA Construction and General Industry CFRs. In addition, ANSI Z359 and A10.48-2016 standards will be discussed. Does your ladder need a cage? Do your workers need harnesses and hooks? Is a rescue plan mandatory? If you are not sure about when, where, and how much fall protection and equipment you need, join us to find the answers.

Objective

The program's overall objective is to instruct students in the safe procedures for working at height, demonstrate new safety technologies and provide education in climbing and employee based rescues. Students receive classroom training, hands-on lab sessions, and graded exams. Our goal is to engage workers and keep the message fresh and up to date. Increased knowledge reduces injuries! Need additional gear to augment your safety plan? Ask an LTR instructor about our discount for students.
